Sequence 6, Application US/09873409
Patent No. US20020037522A1
GENERAL INFORMATION:
APPLICANT: Frank, Markus
APPLICANT: Sayegh, Mohamed
TITLE OF INVENTION: A Gene Encoding a Multidrug
TITLE OF INVENTION: Homologue on Chromosome 7p1
FILE REFERENCE: 81994/268611
CURRENT APPLICATION NUMBER: US/09/873,409
CURRENT FILING DATE: 2001-06-05
NUMBER OF SEG ID NOS: 19

The atrD polymolectide is used to produce nucleic acid molecules which are useful in diagnostic assays for the detection of atrD polymolectides. The atrD polypeptide may be used to identify agents which inhibit multiple drug resistance. These agents may be useful for the treatment of fungal diseases. New antifungal compounds may also be identified using the gene disruption or gene replacement

The specification describes a method whereby cultured transformed fungal cells are used to determine the multiple drug inhibition activity of a compound. The method is useful for providing nucleic acid molecules which encode multiple drug resistance proteins from Aspergillus fumigatus (Afu) which are useful for determining the MDR inhibition of a compound.

The method is used for enhancing the production and secretions of beta-lactam antibiotics like penicillin and cephalosporing
                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       Manipulation of the ABC-transport protein system provides a means enhancing beta-lactam secretion. The present sequence represents 1 P. chrysogenum ABC transporter aa10 protein sequence.

Afl-MDR1 can be synthesised by host cells, partic. Saccharomyces cerevisiae, transformed with vectors that provide for the expression of DNA encoding Afl-MDR1. Transformed host cells can be used to identify cpds. that inhibit fungal MDR activity.

The method is used for enhancing the production and secretions of beta-lactam antibiotics like penicillin and cephalosporins. Manipulation of the ABC-transport protein system provides a means for enhancing beta-lactam secretion. The present sequence represents the

Host cells transformed with the DNA sequence are useful for identification of potential antifungal compounds, and for enhancing the activity of proven antifungal compounds
